

Queros or wooden vessels used in pairs to sip chicha during rituals. They feature incised designs of faces (Inca, 1200-1532 AD)

The queros, or Inca ceremonial vessels, were used in special ritual events and were intended for the consumption of corn chicha, the sacred Inca drink. They were finely carved and decorated, as befits such solemn occasions.