

Bottle with a representation of a warrior sitting on a mountain. It has remnants of inlays (Mochica, 100-800 AD).

Bottle with a representation of a kneeling warrior (Mochica, 100-800 AD).

Bottle representing a seated warrior. It has a stylized headdress, a ceremonial helmet and knife, a coxal protector and a circular shield in the left hand; it has chrysocolla inlays (Mochica, 100-800 AD).

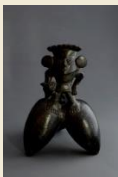

Jug depicting a seated warrior carrying a club, a shield and a stylized headdress (Recuay, 100-600 AD).

Architectural jug depicting multi-level dwellings and warriors with shields in a vigilant attitude (Recuay, 100-600 AD).

Recuay society also shows a certain degree of “militarization”, due to the important range of representations of warriors dressed with weapons and shields, generally with elite aspects. It is known that they were contemporary with the Moche and, probably, there may have been some kind of conflict between them for the control of agropastoral zones that were on the regional limits of both groups.

Bottle depicting an elite character holding a club (Chimú, 900-1400 AD).

Gold and silver tupu. It represents a warrior with a shield and a projectile sling (Chimú, 900-1400 AD).